In 1918, as a result of territorial changes, the personnel and equipment of the university were removed to Vtorich, Russia, where the university was reestablished in 1919. In the same year (1919) the buildings at Dorpat were appropriated for the new Estonian university, "Tartu ülikool." Both universities continue the series of "Acta et commentationes imp. Universitatis jurevicensis (olim dorpatensis)" published 1892-1917, the two current series being entitled respectively:
Acta et commentationes Universitatis dorpatensis. 1921-
(the Estonian university at Dorpat (Tartu), and

Doucet, N. B.

Fundamental principles of the laws of Canada, as they existed under the natives, as they were changed under the French kings, and as they were modified and altered under the domination of England. The general principles of the Custom of Paris, as laid down by the most eminent authors, with the text, and a literal translation of the text. The imperial and other statutes, changing the jurisprudence in either of the provinces of Canada at large. Prefaced by an historical sketch of the origin and rise of religious and political institutions, among the principal nations of the world ... of the origin, rise, and successive changes of the constitutional laws (Continued on next card.)

Transcripts and studies, by Edward Dowden ... 2d ed.
London, K. Paul, Trench, Trubner & co., Ltd., 1896.
4 p., 528 p. 25°.

Reprinted from the Fortnightly review, the Contemporary review, the Nineteenth century and the Cornhill magazine. "Spenser, the poet and teacher" first appeared in Dr. Gowers's privately printed edition of the works of Spenser. "Romeo and Juliet" republished from Cassel & Co.'s edition de luxe, in which it served as an introduction. The first "transcript" is from a manuscript republished from Carlyle's Lectures, at that time not published in any other form; the second is an outline of an unpublished prose work of Shelley, with extracts from his manuscript.

Downing, J., major, pseud.

Pseudonym used by Charles Augustus Davis (1795-1867) as writer of humorous political letters contributed 1833-1834 to the New York Daily Advertiser in imitation of the letters of "Major Jack Downing" by Seth Smith (1792-1868) published in the Portland Courier, 1833-1834, and also issued in book form. Most of the editions are mixed, containing letters of the original "Major Jack Downing" (Seth Smith) with the addition of some letters of "J. Downing, major" (C. A. Davis).

Downing, Major Jack, pseud.

Pseudonym used by Seth Smith (1792-1868) as writer of humorous political letters contributed to the Portland Courier 1833-1834 and repeatedly published in book form.

Often confused with J. Downing, major, pseudonym used in imitation of Smith by Charles Augustus Davis (1795-1867) as writer of similar letters to the New York Daily Advertiser, 1833-1834; also published in book form.

It is apparently an open question whether Seth Smith also contributed some letters to the New York Daily Advertiser. Most of the editions of the letters of Major Jack Downing, or of J. Downing, major, are mixed, including letters from both. There were a number of other "Jack Downings" or "Major Downings" publications, genuine and spurious, exploiting the popularity of the letters.

Draper, Joshua, An essay upon friendship ... 1725. (Card 2)

The essay is preceded by "An epistle introductory, dedicatory and exhortatory, designed by the author as a record to the memory of the (1725) Honorable Francis Maitland, esq; (a late governor of F—) Bt. (1—) and inserted to N— (12)—a, esq; a person who has been in power there, and is now return'd home".
Internal evidence shows that the author of the work was Joshua Draper, who held the post of secretary to the Council during Hastings' administration of Fort St. George, Madras, of Henry D. Lee, Vestiges of old Madras, 1660-1800, 1913, v. 2, p. 217-222.

Instinct in man; a contribution to the psychology of education, by James Dreves ... 2d ed. Cambridge, University press, 1921.

x. 260 p. 32^m.

Bibliography: p. 282-288.

Bibliographical foot-note.

"The only significant difference between this and the first edition is the new appendix on 'The emotional phase of affective experience' which takes the place of the appendix on 'The joy emotion'. This gives the gist of a paper read before a general meeting of the British psychological society on the 19th of June, 1920."—Pref.

Duarte Burón, José, d. 1770?

Ilustración de el derecho que compete a la Santa iglesia cathedral metropolitana de esta ciudad de Mexico, para la percepción del diezmo, que causa el fruto del maguey, el que por medio de su fermentación pasó naturalmente a la especie de pulque, de cuya bebida usan los naturales de estos reynos, y no pocos de los españoles: en que se exponen los ponderables meritos de justicia, que fundan la intención de dicha Sta. iglesia, y que su acción preste indudable, sin embargo de la corrupción, que en fuerza de costumbre, alegan los dueños de haciendas, y ranchos de magueryes para eximirse de la paga: para que en vista de todo se sirva la justificación de la paga: (Continued on next card).

2 p. l., 202, (5) p. incl. port. 10^m.

The author claims that the manuscript, in the possession of Michelangelo Cortesi, Duke of Sermoneta, is the prototype of the "Vita di donna Olympia, Matricola, che governa in chiesa durante il ponteficato d'Innocenzo X. cioè dopo l'anno 1655. scritta dall'abate Gualtero. Composta. P. Michel. 1847." Dubarry, believing in the existence of Gualtero, disputes the usual ascription of the work to Giorgio Lotti, though he grants that the latter may have edited it.

Dublin. National museum of Ireland.

The museum had its origin in the collections of the Royal Dublin society (founded 1783 as Dublin society). In 1785 the society was authorized by an act of the Irish Parliament to purchase a "cabinet of minerals"; a collection made by Nathaniel Gottfried Leske (born 1757, died 1798) and known as the Leskean cabinet or Leskean museum. It was later called National library museum, and as early as 1821 was referred to in the publications as a national museum. In 1877 it was transferred to the government by the "Dublin Science and art museum act"; in 1890 it was taken over by the Department of agriculture and technical instruction for Ireland. In 1922, under the treaty between Ireland and Great Britain, it became a purely Irish institution, supported by Irish free state funds. In 1921 the administration of the museum was handed over by the Department of agriculture to the Department of education.

Dubuque college and seminary, Dubuque, Ia.

Originated 1852 in the training of young men as missionaries by Adrian Van Vleet, pastor of the First German Presbyterian church, Dubuque. In 1864 the school was taken under the care of the Presbyterians of Dubuque and Davenport, and in 1870 it passed under the care of the General assembly of the Presbyterian church in the U. S. A. The theological school became known as the German Presbyterian theological school of the Northwest, while the collegiate department developed into Dubuque college. In 1911 both college and theological school were reorganized under the joint name: Dubuque German college and seminary. In 1917 the word German was officially dropped from the title.
